Professorship in “Social Work in the Migration Society”
at the Department of Social Work

What to expect

- You will teach on our Bachelor and Master’s programmes at the Department of Social Work.
- Your teaching and research activities will ideally focus on topics of migration-related social work.
- You enjoy contributing your expertise from both professional and academic work to interdisciplinary contexts.
- You will also contribute to self-government at the department and to the further development of degree programmes, and will be involved in academic continuing education.
- It is quite natural for you to deliver courses involving digital technology, possibly also in English.

Your background

- Your expertise is underpinned by a degree in Social Work (or a comparable qualification) and an above-average doctorate.
- You also have relevant professional experience in migration-related social work.
- You are familiar with contemporary discourse, theories and developments, as well as with the institutional, legal and political references of social work in the migration society.
- In particular, you have a profound knowledge of the core activity of social work and migration, and of specific plans of action for anti-discriminatory and anti-racist social work.
- Ideally, you have extensive experience in teaching, and are familiar with applying for external funding and collaborating in research projects.
- Your portfolio is complemented by a network of partners from the

We offer you

- A permanent W2 professorship on civil servant conditions will enable you to make a valuable contribution to teaching, research and university management.
- You will be able to strike a healthy balance between work and leisure / family life.
- We offer an extensive portfolio of didactical further training opportunities, enabling you to continue gaining skills.
- You will have the opportunity to implement research projects and externally funded projects at a researchintensive university.
- You can look forward to an exciting challenge as part of our team; dedicated colleagues will assist you from the very beginning.
